

Heartburn Drugs Linked to Heart Attacks, Warn Doctors

Safe, natural aloe alternative stops acid reflux fast with stunning 10-fold reduction in stomach acid

BOSTON —

Can it get any worse for the millions of Americans who gulp pills and antacids during the day and sleep propped up on pillows at night?

If constant heartburn, gas and constipation were not enough, now comes word that a popular class of acid reflux drugs used by tens of millions of Americans may damage the heart and even cause a heart attack.

Reflux Drugs Risky?

In a study published in the American Heart Association's journal, Circulation, Methodist Hospital researchers found that long term use of proton pump inhibitors, or PPIs like Prevacid®, Nexium®, and Prilosec®, may reduce the ability of blood vessels to relax by more than 30 percent.

"Blood vessels need to be able to contract and open up to control blood flow," says study author, John P. Cooke, clinical professor and chair of the department of cardiovascular sciences at Houston Methodist Hospital.

Taking PPI heartburn drugs may put you at risk of a heart attack, say top cardiologists.

Earlier studies have linked PPIs to increased risk of bone fractures and increased risk of infection.

Doctors nationwide are looking for safer alternatives to PPIs.

Liza Leal, MD, an award-winning author and speaker, and practicing family physician in Houston, Texas, has just what the doctor ordered.

Dr. Leal, AloeCure company spokesperson, and a growing number of doctors are bypassing the potential side effects of antacids and PPIs, and going 'all-natural.'

Natural, Safe and Effective

To her acid reflux patients, Dr. Leal recommends a fast-acting, drug-free, pure aloe extract called AloeCure®.

AloeCure does what no other heartburn remedy can do — it actually stops heartburn before it starts.

Ralph Burns, who once suffered from severe heartburn, knows all about it.

Throatful of Battery Acid

"For the better part of my life," says Ralph, "I purposely avoided a lot of foods, especially foods with even a hint of seasoning."

"If I didn't, it would feel like somebody poured hot lead or battery acid down my throat."

Ralph tried a number of treatments, but nothing worked.

Then one day at dinner, a friend of his suggested that he try an aloe drink.

Ralph laughed and said, "Thanks, but that doesn't sound good at all"

A Surprise

"Well, the next day," says Ralph, "this guy brings me a whole box of an aloe vera-based drink called AloeCure."

Ralph didn't want to hurt his friend's feelings, so he tried it right away.

"To my surprise, it tasted good! It has a pleasant grape flavor that I actually enjoy drinking."

Intrigued, he decided to try a little experiment. "I stopped taking my heartburn drugs all altogether, and replaced them with AloeCure."

Something Remarkable

"Then," smiles Ralph, "something remarkable happened... nothing! Not even the slightest hint of indigestion!"

"Here's the best part," he says, "the next day, we had Italian food, which is my stomach's arch enemy."

"For the first time in 40 years, thanks to AloeCure, I enjoyed my Italian food and I didn't need pills or tablets to avoid indigestion!"

How It Works

AloeCure stops heartburn before it starts by regulating stomach acid thanks to a unique acid-buffering compound of natural calcium-malate.

This fast-acting buffering helps stabilize pH levels, so heartburn quickly goes away.

Reduces Acid 10-Fold

Dr. Santiago Rodriguez, a leading expert on aloe and founder of Lorand Labs, an aloe vera research firm, says, "In minutes, aloe vera juice like that found in AloeCure

Long term use of modern acid reflux drugs called PPIs, or proton pump inhibitors, have been linked to increased risk of bone fractures and now, heart disease. Many healthcare professionals have turned to a fast-acting aloe vera extract that gently buffers stomach acid, restoring healthy pH levels.

can promote a ten-fold reduction in stomach acid."

In addition to extinguishing acid reflux, AloeCure helps the entire digestive system, dispatching polysaccharide-rich molecular repair teams that spread through the digestive system to soothe damaged tissues.

A Multi-Tasker

In her practice, Dr. Leal recommends AloeCure, as an alternative to patients with acid reflux, heartburn, and occasional indigestion.

A ground-breaking study at the University of Miami has even linked aloe vera use with improved cognitive performance.

While aloe is good for the mind, it is even better for the body, according to Dr. Leal.

Joints Say "Aaah!"

This explains some of the added health benefits, says Dr. Leal, including healthier joints and muscles.

"I tell my patients that AloeCure will also make their tummy feel better."

"The first step in getting my patients to live well without using a pharmaceutical," says Dr. Leal, "is with AloeCure. I use it in my medical practice because it works."

Speedy Relief

Gil H. attests to AloeCure's speedy relief.

"AloeCure is soothing going down and starts to work almost immediately!"

Stomach acid can dissolve a spoon in just minutes. Aloe vera heartburn discovery starts to reduce harsh stomach acid ten-fold in seconds!

Gloria H. agrees, "I don't have to worry about going out late and eating because I know that I can come home and still get a good night's rest."

"I no longer have to prop myself up on pillows to sleep!"
